Overview

Staying calm under pressure is a must when practicing law. A former EMT, Abigail Robertson applies her experience navigating high stress situations and tackling complex matters as an attorney. “Being an attorney allows me to think critically, problem-solve, and continuously learn,” she says. “The evolving nature of the law pushes me to continue learning and growing in this practice.”

Before joining our firm, Abigail worked as a law clerk for the General Counsel division at the Los Angeles City Attorney’s Office, providing research and strategic insights and corresponding with various departments on legal and procedural matters. She also desires to give her time and experience to others, having previously provided one-on-one assistance with legal writing and concepts at Elon University School of Law, her alma mater.

In her free time, Abigail enjoys exploring new restaurants and enjoying workout classes, as well as reading and painting. If given the chance, she’d love to revisit the beautiful and diverse landscapes of Iceland.
