Overview

Driven to succeed, Amber Fye has a keen eye for detail, quickly learning the intricacies of each case and doing whatever it takes to get to the bottom of the issues at hand. Recognizing that no two clients are the same, she treats each uniquely while giving them her absolute best. Caring deeply about her clients as both companies and people, Amber takes time to learn what each is excited about in their business and what they are most afraid of.

The first person in her family to attend college, Amber set her sights on a career in law when she was young. She worked hard to develop the discipline and intellect necessary to one day succeed in law school and as a practicing attorney. She enjoys the fast pace and continual challenge of learning new details about her clients businesses and how the law relates to the challenges they face.

During undergrad, Amber worked in family law at the Dauphin County Bar Association in Harrisburg, PA., an experience that sharpened her ability to communicate well with people from diverse backgrounds.

While in law school at the Antonin Scalia Law School at George Mason University, Amber participated in trial advocacy and earned a third-year litigation practice award. Prior to joining Hedrick Gardner, she served as a personal injury law clerk at a law firm in Alexandria, VA, and also worked as a criminal law clerk at a firm in Fairfax, VA.
