Overview

John Byrd is an experienced civil litigation defense attorney with an emphasis on personal injury and wrongful death claims arising from motor vehicle accidents. He has successfully litigated and tried to verdict many such claims for clients including insurance companies, private companies, retailers, contractors, and manufacturers. John's experience also includes cases involving premises liability, products liability, and business disputes. He has argued before the North Carolina Court of Appeals and the North Carolina Supreme Court.

While he settles many of his cases before trial, John is an accomplished trial attorney known for his ability to clearly present complex legal issues and build rapport with juries through his straightforward, authentic courtroom presence.

Whether in settlement negotiations or at trial, John combines his extensive litigation experience with a commitment to accessible client service. He remains available to guide clients through every aspect of their case, and his track record and client referrals speak to both his legal knowledge and his dedication to the people he represents.
