Overview

Mallory Hopkins' goal is to see each of her clients arrive at the best possible outcome. A soccer player during college, she brings the same level of energy and teamwork to her practice as an attorney at Hedrick Gardner.

Before joining the firm, Mallory represented the State of North Carolina as an Assistant District Attorney under the D.A. Spencer Merriweather in Mecklenburg County, training new hires and sharpening her courtroom skills. In law school, she published an article titled "Taking the Game Back: A Response to the District Court Ruling Against the United States Women's National Soccer Team Under the Equal Pay Act."

Mallory enjoys reading and spending time with her family during her free time. When she can, she joins her family at their favorite summer spot, Ocean Isle Beach.
