Overview

Ragin Lee is an attorney in our Columbia office where she primarily handles business and construction matters. She craves the opportunity to solve problems and guide clients through challenging situations, and to protect their interests within the framework of the law. Her goal is to provide a voice and stand up for each client she represents.

Her practice is rooted in her values, being an active member of a faith-based study group and regularly engaging with the community. She proudly became the first lawyer in her family, who is central to her life and supported her in this achievement.

Prior to her time with Hedrick Gardner, Ragin clerked at multiple law offices drafting interrogatories and complaints and attending multiple hearings. At South Carolina School of Law, she earned a CALI award and served as Treasurer of the Labor and Employment Law Society.

Apart from practicing law, Ragin enjoys exercising at Orange Theory, exploring local restaurants, and discovering new TV shows.
