Overview

Ryan Mitiguy perceives the law as a puzzle to be solved, an approach that enables him to provide analytical solutions and assist his clients in achieving their goals. His focus on administrative law allows him to assist professionals and the public alike, akin to fitting two pieces of a puzzle together, providing a clearer picture for his clients.

His prior experience adds another dimension; while obtaining a Bachelor of Arts in Criminal Justice from Norwich University, he assisted Juvenile Probation Officers in Hartford, Connecticut.

Following graduation, Ryan spent time in healthcare recruitment and human resources management. He eventually returned to his passion for law by pursuing his Juris Doctor from Campbell University, where he assisted attorneys in the Office of the Federal Public Defender in the Eastern District of North Carolina.

His time away from work involves the outdoors (hiking, skiing, and camping in particular), and spending time with his family.
