Overview

Two things drive Travis, helping people when they need it the most and solving complex problems. These passions have led him to a career as an attorney in the firm's General Liability Practice Group. Travis started his journey at Clemson University where he graduated magna cum laude. While at Clemson, he was a President's List and Dean's List student. He also served as an editor of The Pendulum, Clemson's international affairs magazine.

After graduating from Clemson, Travis went on to the South Carolina School of Law where he continued to excel. During law school, was a member of the USC Law Mock Trial Bar, competing in mock trial competitions across the country. He was a member of the Student Bar Association and the proud recipient of the Ronald L. Motley Memorial Scholarship. He graduated cum laude, and, like his Clemson days, he was on both the President's List and Dean's List.

In between his years of law school, Travis was fortunate to gain valuable experience shadowing multiple judges in both South Carolina's Family and Circuit Courts. He also interned for two law firms during those summers.

Travis is a big fan of Clemson sports as well as the Arsenal Football Club. He also enjoys playing golf, reading books, and spending time with his dog Oliver.
