Preston Rollero puts his disciplined personality to work on behalf of his clients. Driven by a desire to support people facing hardship, he proves to each client that he is their advocate and will work tirelessly to achieve the best possible outcome for them.

His desire to serve others in difficult moments led Preston to work as an EMT and firefighter prior to law school, an experience that provided him the privilege to serve not only the sick and injured, but in some cases, also family members who arrived on the scene.

During law school at the Wake Forest University School of Law, Preston served as a research assistant for professor Gregory Parks and was a member of the Litigation Externship Clinic. He completed internships with the Wake County Public Defender's Office in Raleigh, the Forsyth County District Attorney's Office in Winston Salem, and at the law firm of Robinson & Lawing in Winston-Salem. Prior to joining Hedrick Gardner, he worked at another insurance defense firm in Raleigh for two years.

When he is not practicing law, you will find Preston putting his disciplined personality to work physically by training in Brazilian Jiu-Jitsu and Muay Thai and sharpening his musical skills on the guitar and drums. He is also an avid runner and cyclist.
