William "Billy" Myers has a competitive spirit that fuels his hunger for getting things done for his clients, whether it's at the one-on-one level or in the courtroom. His civil litigation practice includes defending prominent retailers and insurance companies in workers' compensation claims before the North Carolina Industrial Commission and beyond.

Before joining Hedrick Gardner, Billy honed his analytical and leadership skills in the corporate world. He helped lead an e-Discovery team for a global consulting firm, assisting clients with high-stakes matters involving securities regulations and federal and state litigation. He also led a team focused on data breach response, helping clients stay ahead of evolving privacy standards. This diverse experience fuels his ability to tackle intricate legal challenges with precision and creativity.

Outside the office, Billy cherishes time with his wife and enjoys biking on the greenways of Charlotte, experimenting in the kitchen, and woodworking.
